MARK RICCIUTO

AFL Media Personality

A South Australian legend following a brilliant career spanning 312 games with the Adelaide Crows, Mark "Roo" Ricciuto has since turned his attention to entertaining the nation with his presence in the media.

With vast football knowledge and a sharp sense of humour, Ricciuto shines in his role providing special comments for radio's Triple M Football and is equally successful in his on-screen work with Channel 7 as a panellist on AFL Game Day. Completing his presence across all forms of media, Ricciuto writes for the Adelaide Advertiser.

Debuting for the Crows as a 17-year old, Ricciuto quickly became a household name in South Australia. His reputation was confirmed with All-Australian honours in 1994, his second year in the AFL. Ricciuto would go on to achieve the honour an amazing eight times, captaining the side twice. In 1998, Ricciuto was a key member of Adelaide's back-to-back premiership side, winning his first club best and fairest. The year was also marked with selection in the Australian International Rules team to take on Ireland.

In 2000, Adelaide announced their Team of the Decade, commemorating ten years since their establishment in the AFL. Ricciuto was named on the Half Back line and was later declared the greatest player to represent Adelaide in that time. A few months later Ricciuto would earn the Crow's captaincy, a post he held until 2007. After a dominant 2003, Ricciuto was awarded the highest individual honour in the AFL, sharing the Brownlow Medal with Nathan Buckley and Adam Goodes. He would come agonisingly close to repeating the feat the next year, finishing runner-up in 2004.

In 2008, after a then club record 312 AFL games, the 'Roo' called it a day. He retired a Brownlow Medallist, eight-time All Australian, premiership player, 3-time club best and fairest winner, AFL and AFC Life Member, and Captain of the Italian VFL/AFL Team of the Century. A successful publican and hotelier, Ricciuto resides in Adelaide with his wife Sarah and children Sophie, Nick and Joe.
